BOOGERTMAN + PARTNERS

for God's Window Skywalk

Mpumalanga, South Africa

The architecture of God's Window Skywalk 'lifts the landscape' and 'tucks in' the building's mass beneath a gently curved green roof that rises from the ground plane at one end of the site and touches down at the far edge, so that it reads as topography. The skywalk's faceted geometry is an abstracted interpretation of a praying mantis — a bearer of good fortune in local mythology — giving architectural expression to local cultural meaning.

VERB ARCHITECTURE

for APERTURE

Klein Karoo, Western Cape

Through its orientation, materiality, apertures, and spatial sequences, the architecture becomes a mediator between human presence and the vast cycles that govern the region: celestial motion, climatic flux, seasonal change, and the enduring geology beneath. Here, architecture becomes less about shelter and more about awareness: a contemplative threshold between the self and the sublime.
